In 1816, the town directory was as follows: Merchants, Victor & King, David McClure, John Newberry, Richard Dearborn, Jacob Doyle, John Sering; hotel landlords, John Paul, J. & N. Hunt; physicians, Howes, Canby, Hodges, Cravens and Goode; ministers, Baptist, Jesse Vawter, at North Madison; Presbyterian, Thomas C. Searl; Methodist, Gamaliel Taylor; lawyers, Jeremiah Sullivan, F. D. Lanier and William Carpenter.

N. B. Palmer, Brook Bennett and J. H. Wallace represented the county in the Legislature.

The house on the corner of Third and Poplar streets was built by Joseph Meade, in 1817.

The house where Mrs. J. G. Marshall lives was built by Felix Brant, in 1818.

The oldest houses now standing in the city are on the alley (east side) on the south side of High street, between Main and Walnut streets; another house is the little red front, on the river bank, just above William Phibb's. The front frame is sixty years old.
